AMID COVID-19 RESPONSE, SCDA WORKING FOR FARMERS

BY EVA MOORE

During the early days of South Carolina's response to the growing threat of COVID-19, the routines were mostly familiar to those of us who've seen state residents prepare for severe weather. Grocery stores ran out of toilet paper and bread. Some people made plans for working from home. Some events were rescheduled.

But on March 17, when Gov. Henry McMaster ordered all restaurants and bars in South Carolina to close their dine-in operations temporarily to help stop the spread of the virus, it became clear that life was about to change for many South Carolina food service workers and the farmers and other businesses that supply them.

In the coming days, many businesses adapted. Wholesalers reported huge drops in sales as restaurant orders went down – but many pivoted to selling directly to consumers, like Senn Brothers, which began offering $30 produce boxes for pickup at its West Columbia location. Farmers that usually sell to restaurants began offering produce delivery, created ad hoc Community-Supported Agriculture (CSA) programs, set up pickup locations, and made other changes.

The South Carolina Department of Agriculture sprang into action, too. We created a list on our website of these direct-to-consumer produce opportunities, organized by region. It's been widely shared on social media. Consumers are looking for ways to help South Carolina farmers, and the list offers them an easy way to find nearby farm-fresh food. You can find the list at agriculture.sc.gov/coronavirus/local. To be added to the list, please email LauraKate McAllister at landerson@scda.sc.gov.

The road ahead for the restaurant and bar industry is a tough one. One widely cited analysis suggests 75 percent of independent restaurants won't survive the COVID-19 response. Helping keep wholesalers and small farms in business is crucial not just to maintaining people's livelihoods but to making sure some of those restaurants can bounce back after the crisis.

SCDA is working in other ways to help during the crisis:

- We've been pushing to make sure state and local leaders recognize that farmers markets are just as essential as grocery stores when it comes to feeding Americans. Our own State Farmers Markets remain open, offering farmers a way to sell their products directly to people. We've released a tip sheet for farmers markets to promote safety, including distancing vendors from each other and asking customers to maintain six feet of physical distance from each other.
- Without access to seasonal workers, many farmers in South Carolina might be unable to harvest their 2020 crops. We've worked with the federal government to ensure the US Embassy continues processing H2-A visas during the crisis.
- The Department of Homeland Security defines "Essential Critical Infrastructure Workers" to include food, agriculture and transportation workers – and we've helped amplify that message, letting state and local leaders know that the food supply chain depends on agriculture staying on the job.
- We've put up a coronavirus page, agriculture.sc.gov/coronavirus, where we're gathering resources and information.

As the pandemic grows and our response develops, SCDA will keep doing our part to help farmers.

WE'LL GET THROUGH

Since I began writing this column a week or so ago, life has changed in ways we would have been hard pressed to imagine even a month ago.

South Carolinians have dealt with all kinds of crises over the past several years, from hurricanes to the Charleston church massacre. But the COVID-19 outbreak, and the steps that communities are taking to fight it, are unprecedented – in my lifetime, at least.

Events are cancelled or postponed – even weddings and, unfortunately, funeral services. Restaurants are closed for dining in. Schoolchildren were sent home and (as of this writing) will be home until the end of April. Personally, I think I have the cleanest hands in the Carolinas and, following the CDC guidelines, I have sung "Happy Birthday" to someone at least a hundred times!

Yet for many rural Americans, not that much has changed. Farmers were "working from home" long before it was something that required a laptop. The biggest impact socially is probably watching our church services online.

During this crisis, farmers are critical to keeping Americans fed and healthy, and the South Carolina Department of Agriculture is committed to supporting South Carolina agribusiness during this time. We've been advocating for farmers markets, working with the federal government to ensure farmers can still hire seasonal workers through the H-2A program, and helping promote farmers and wholesalers who are selling direct to consumers during the outbreak. On social media and on our website, we've been collecting resources for farmers, farmers markets and others in the agribusiness industry, and assuring the public that the food supply chain is secure and well equipped to handle disruptions like this pandemic. And we'll keep working to help South Carolina agribusiness through these unprecedented times.

I'll close by saying this has been an especially strange couple of months for those who work with cows. "Coronavirus" is a word I've heard all my life: As a dairy farmer, I used to vaccinate cows for bovine coronavirus, an illness that can cause digestive distress in cattle – and that scientists say has nothing to do with the current outbreak spreading across the world, which is a respiratory virus that infects humans.

It's strange when a familiar word takes on new meaning. I'll never be able to go back to my old definition of coronavirus – and I suspect that's not the only thing this crisis will change forever.

Let's get through it together. Let's support our farmers and support each other.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE CLOSES OFFICES TO PUBLIC, FARMERS MARKETS REMAIN OPEN

BY EVA MOORE

COLUMBIA – In response to the ongoing COVID-19 outbreak, and in accordance with Gov. Henry McMaster’s March 19 executive order, the South Carolina Department of Agriculture closed all physical office locations to the public on March 20, 2020. As of press time March 27, it was unknown when offices would reopen.

The three state farmers markets (in West Columbia, Greenville, and Florence) remain open for regular business. We urge you to support South Carolina farmers during this time of crisis.

SCDA staff are still available by phone and email, with many working remotely during the COVID-19 response. The department is still accepting deliveries via UPS, USPS, and FedEx. However, the Metrology Lab is closed and is not accepting or releasing weights at this time.

SCDA also made the decision to postpone all events at SCDA facilities until at least May 10, 2020, to protect our South Carolina citizens and minimize opportunities to spread COVID-19 in our communities. This includes the Phillips Market Center, along with the State and Regional Farmers Markets. Events will be rescheduled or held virtually, as feasible.

For up-to-date information and resources, visit SCDA’s COVID-19 page at agriculture.sc.gov/coronavirus.

SOUTH CAROLINA SEEKS SOYBEAN FARMERS FOR UNITED SOYBEAN BOARD

BY SCDA

The South Carolina Soybean Board is looking for soybean farmers interested in filling South Carolina’s regular and alternate positions on the United Soybean Board, which will become vacant in December 2020.

The United Soybean Board is made up of 78 volunteer farmer-leaders who oversee the investments of the soybean checkoff on behalf of all U.S. soybean farmers. Checkoff funds are invested in the areas of meal, oil and sustainability, focusing on programs and partnerships that drive demand and preference for U.S. soy. As stipulated in the Soybean Promotion, Research and Consumer Information Act, USDA’s Agricultural Marketing Service has oversight responsibilities for USB and the soybean checkoff.

Any farmer interested in applying needs to meet the following criteria:

1. Be a soybean producer who owns or shares the ownership and risk of loss in soybean production
2. Be a resident of South Carolina
3. Be at least 21 years of age

To be considered for the national leadership position, interested farmers need to submit a USDA Background Information Form before the deadline. To obtain this form, contact Laura Lester Jordan at 803-734-1767 or llester@scda.sc.gov.

The U.S. Secretary of Agriculture will make the final appointments. The USDA has a policy that membership on USDA boards and committees is open to all individuals without regard to race, color, national origin, gender, religion, age, disability, political beliefs, sexual orientation and marital or family status. The chosen individual appointed is eligible to serve a total of three consecutive terms.

For more information about the United Soybean Board, visit unitedsoybean.org.

AGRICULTURE COMMISSIONER: FOOD AND FIBER INDUSTRIES ARE ESSENTIAL DURING EMERGENCY

BY SCDA

COLUMBIA – Agriculture, food production and food distribution are essential industries that provide food and fiber for all and play a critical role in the state's economy. Never is this more true than during an emergency.

During the COVID-19 response, Commissioner of Agriculture Hugh Weathers is urging the food and fiber industry and its dedicated workforce to recognize their essential role in helping their fellow South Carolinians. The US Department of Homeland Security has released a list of "Essential Critical Infrastructure Workers" that includes food, agriculture and transportation workers. Workers in these industries should continue to report to work because they are vital to the food and health supply chain – while following CDC guidance to stay away if they are sick.

"In South Carolina, key industries like poultry and forestry are essential to feeding and caring for our population," Weathers said. "During this unsettling time, as businesses take appropriate steps to keep their workers safe, food and fiber industry workers have a special responsibility to maintain their normal work schedules. I applaud the many workers helping to keep us all fed and healthy."

"Working together, we will get through this difficult time," Weathers said.

COMMISSIONER WEATHERS URGES CALM ON FOOD SUPPLY

BY SCDA

COLUMBIA – As South Carolinians come together to help stop the spread of COVID-19, Commissioner of Agriculture Hugh Weathers wants people to know that there is plenty of food to weather the crisis.

"As we monitor the coronavirus outbreak, we've reached out to farmers, grocery stores and other industry partners, and we have no concerns about their ability to continue supplying food to us all," Weathers said.

From peach growers to poultry producers, South Carolina farmers continue to grow and raise food; and the domestic transportation and retail infrastructure is well adapted to handle increased demand.

Nonetheless, Commissioner Weathers urged people to be prepared, but not hoard food or other supplies. South Carolinians may see some empty shelves, but retailers are quickly restocking as new deliveries come in.

"The American food supply chain is stable and robust," Weathers said.

While the retail supply chain is in good shape, the restaurant industry is seeing a dramatic drop in business, and schools statewide have closed. As a result, SCDA is hearing reports of business lost for wholesalers, food hubs, and small farms. We've had fruitful discussions about how some of those businesses plan to adapt in the near future, and will continue those discussions.

As for food safety, SCDA is not aware of any evidence suggesting COVID-19 can be transmitted by food or food packaging. However, it is always important to follow good hygiene practices when handling or preparing foods: wash hands and surfaces often, separate raw meat from other foods, cook to the right temperature, and refrigerate foods promptly.

Above all, Weathers emphasizes that South Carolina and its farmers and food producers will weather the crisis.

"In times of emergency, we must remember that we are part of a strong community," Weathers said. "We've seen the resilience and generosity of South Carolinians during hurricanes, floods and tragedies, and we'll see it as we fight the spread of the coronavirus."

IN MIDST OF NATIONWIDE CRISIS, STUDY REVEALS CRITICAL ROLE OF FOOD & AG SECTORS IN FEEDING THE ECONOMY

WASHINGTON – The ongoing COVID-19 crisis has served as a reminder of the critical role that the United States food and agriculture industries play in fueling our nation and ensuring that Americans are supplied with an abundance of safe food during this time of need. America's food and agricultural industry is committed to helping the country get through the COVID-19 pandemic. A new nationwide economic impact study, commissioned by 21 food and agriculture groups and available at FeedingTheEconomy.com, reinforces the significance of these industries as critical to day-to-day American life.

As Americans follow Center for Disease Control (CDC) guidance to take precautions and practice social distancing, the 20 million employees in the post-farm gate industry are working overtime to produce, distribute and ensure access to high-quality food and agricultural products during this unprecedented time. Further, the nearly 3 million people employed at supermarkets, grocery stores, convenience stores, and other establishments are on the front lines providing for the needs of Americans.

Meanwhile, the lives of hard-working people in nearly 14.2 million jobs in establishments where food and beverages are sold for on-premise consumption have been upended by state and local restrictions on gatherings, events and dining.

The economic impact study released March 23 shows that one-fifth of the nation's economy and one-fourth of American jobs are linked to the food and agriculture sectors, either directly or indirectly. Additionally, the analysis broke down the food and agriculture sectors' economic impact by state and congressional district. Here are the key findings:

Total Jobs: 46,856,444

Total Wages: $2.27 trillion

Total Taxes: $885.29 billion

Exports: $148.4 billion

Total Food and Industry Economic Impact: $7.63 trillion

Food industry experts have indicated the demand for food, water and cleaning products over the course of recent weeks has exceeded any previous shopping holiday season, causing retailers to experience delays between replenishment. In a show of supply chain strength and collaboration, an ad-hoc partnership between the International Foodservice Distributors Association (IFDA) and FMI-Food Industry Association connects foodservice distributors that have excess capacity (products, transportation services, warehousing services) to assist food retailers and wholesalers that require additional resources to fulfill needs at grocery stores, which are experiencing skyrocketing demand.

"Recent events are testing the resiliency of our agriculture and food system. This research helps shore up something we already knew: food and agriculture is critical to all Americans and the economic prosperity of our country," said National Association of State Departments of Agriculture (NASDA) CEO Dr. Barb Glenn.

"Viewing this report from the COVID-19 perspective, one can see that our efforts to keep the food production and distribution infrastructure operating efficiently is critical to both human and economic needs," said John Bode, President & CEO of the Corn Refiners Association (CRA). "Regrettably, the report also shows the substantial economic impact of our nation's restaurants and their related businesses being virtually shut down by the need for social distancing."

"99.4 percent of American households buy and enjoy frozen foods," said Alison Bodor, President and CEO of the American Frozen Food Institute (AFFI). "Frozen food companies and every worker in the supply chain take pride in providing nutritious, affordable meal options that help feed families in ways that allow them to enjoy variety, have more time together and reduce food waste."

To measure the total economic impact of the sectors, the analysis also includes the indirect and induced economic activity surrounding these industries, which captures upstream and downstream activity. For example, when a farm equipment retailer hires new employees because farmers are buying more tractors, experts consider the new salaries as an indirect impact. Similarly, when a retail associate spends her paycheck, an induced economic impact occurs. Together, these impacts have a multiplier effect on the already formidable direct impact of food and agriculture.

CERTIFIED SOUTH CAROLINA STRAWBERRY FARMS

Due to the uncertainty and fast-moving nature of the COVID-19 outbreak, you should check with the individual farm to determine whether it is offering U-pick strawberries, on-farm sales, or other sales models. Always contact the farm via phone, email, or social media prior to arriving in person.

NEW PROGRAM PUTS PEOPLE BACK TO WORK DELIVERING FRESH PRODUCE

BY FOODSHARE SOUTH CAROLINA

It's getting hard to get the things we need. Workers are being laid off as the demand for produce has dropped. Farmers' crops are spoiling in the fields because some of their largest customers have shut down. The COVID-19 crisis tears at the fundamentals of how our society works.

What if there was a way to get the supply chain operating again, put low-wage workers back to work, and get boxes filled with high-quality, fresh produce to homes?

Now there is. It's called Farmers2Neighbors. It's a partnership of FoodShare South Carolina and Senn Brothers produce company. They've teamed up to help nourish the Midlands, restore jobs lost at the South Carolina State Farmers Market, and heal some of the breaks in our food distribution system.

The Community Produce Box is more than "just a box of food." It's a way of knitting our society back together when coronavirus is driving us apart.

Here's how it works:

Residents purchase produce boxes. Senn Brothers purchases produce from local farmers as well as from regional producers. The market is able to rehire employees laid off because of the coronavirus. Those workers will box up the fresh produce and deliver it to the neighborhoods that have placed orders for boxes.

The program is reaching out to neighborhood associations in the greater Columbia area to sign up for and help distribute the food boxes. Residents can purchase boxes online. But any group of neighbors, or a church or other organization in the area, can appoint a captain who can coordinate and see that the boxes are picked up from the distribution point in their neighborhood, and then delivered to individual homes.

This is produce that would otherwise go to waste for lack of a market. It is all high-quality. No seconds.

Suitable precautions will be taken to ensure safety. Workers at the Farmers Market will use gloves and employ EPA-registered sanitizer products in their cleaning and sanitizing practices. Volunteers will practice social distancing in picking up and delivering boxes. Boxes will be placed in volunteers' trunks at distribution points, and there will be no hand-to-hand contact.

Each box will cost $21. That's a dollar more than FoodShare's usual programs because the ordering will be done online by credit or debit card. SNAP participants can buy a box for only $10, and neighborhood captains will be instructed in how to handle those orders.

To enroll your neighborhood or organization in the program, or to sign up individually to receive a box at your home, go to foodsharesc.org/farmers2neighbors.
